About Me

I am a Multimedia Designer and Specialist with a background in interactive products, advanced UI/UX, marketing and visual storytelling. I am completing my Master's in Animation, Interactives and Video Games, where I have pursued research-led creative practice and gained recognition for academic and professional excellence.

My focus is on creating interactive experiences with social impact, especially exploring how game design can support mental health literacy and emotional awareness. I am passionate about digital art, interaction and research that positions games as cultural tools for empathy and reflection.

With over six years of international experience across education, government and commercial sectors, I produce high-quality multimedia outcomes that combine creativity and strategy. This mix of practice and inquiry equips me to contribute to design scholarship while advancing innovative approaches in practice-based research.
